STATEMENT

I approach my painting in an intuitive manner. There is no particular idea or message intended. Usually I am surprised at what imagery (shape) may occur. Looking back several years, my paintings show a need for flatness, heavy texture and the development of a new and unique imagery (shape) with each painting, although certain shapes do reappear off and on unintentionally. Paintings go through a number of stages and layers of paint until an appealing content or relationship develops. My color leans heavily towards blacks, grays, whites and pinks; with a strong contrast between shape and field and within the use of a line. A somewhat recognizable or realistic image is apparant, but the reality of that image is of little importance; only the impact of the shape itself and its interaction on a flat surface is of any consequence. If there is more than one shape, attaining the appropriate relationship (tension), one to the other is my objective. Elimination of anything within the painting not a significant part of those relationships is essential.

We would appreciate having a statement about your philosophy and work as an artist—either general or something specific about the piece(s) selected for this year's May Show to aid us in the preparation of gallery talks and in the release of publicity materials. For more space, use the back of this sheet.

I approach my painting in an intuitive manner. There is no particular idea or message intended. Usually I am surprised by what image (shape) may occur. Looking back several years, my paintings show a need for flatness, heavy texture and the development of a new and unique image (shape) with each painting, although certain shapes do reappear on off and unintentionally. Paintings go through a number of stages and layers of paint until an appealing content or relationship of contents starts to develop. My palette leans heavily towards blacks, grays, whites and pinks; with a strong contrast somewhere in the painting, usually accomplished within the use of a line. Somewhat recognizable or realistic images are apparent, but the reality of that image is of little importance; only the shape itself and how it interacts on a flat surface is of any interest to me. Placement of a shape, creating tensions and yet a balance within the total painting area are my main concern. If there is more than one shape, attaining the appropriate relationship, one to the other is my objective. I also have a strong need to eliminate anything within the painting that is not a significant part of those relationships.
